

Introduction to Balancing Dignity of Risk and Duty of Care

Welcome to "Balancing Dignity of Risk and Duty of Care," a comprehensive online course designed specifically for NDIS providers, support workers, and disability care professionals. Navigating the delicate balance between empowering participants to make their own choices (Dignity of Risk) and ensuring their safety and well-being (Duty of Care) is one of the most critical challenges in the disability support sector.

This course provides an in-depth exploration of the NDIS Supported Decision Making Policy, NDIS Practice Standards, and Participant Safeguarding Policy. Throughout this training, you will learn how to implement person-centered supports, respect individual values and beliefs, and foster independence while maintaining a safe environment. We will dive into proactive risk identification, intersectionality, and how to strengthen informal support networks.

Furthermore, the course thoroughly covers the NDIS Code of Conduct, guiding workers on how to act with respect, communicate effectively, obtain informed consent, and appropriately report incidents or concerns. By the end of this course, you will be equipped with the practical knowledge and ethical frameworks needed to support people with disabilities in making informed decisions, managing risks proactively, and preventing exploitation or abuse.

Enhance your professional skills, ensure compliance with NDIS quality indicators, and champion the rights and safety of the participants you support. Enrol today to gain an introduction to the essential balance of dignity and care.
